Original Value: La découverte des « tombes royales d'Ur » par C.L. Woolley constitue une étape dans l'histoire de l'archéologie du Pays des Deux Fleuves et eut une répercussion sensationnelle dans la presse grâce aux riches offrandes funéraires qu'elles contenaient et au caractère macabre de l'inhumation. Dans une vaste antichambre de la tombe de Pu-abi, deuxième épouse du roi Meskalamdug, se trouvaient les dépouilles de plusieurs serviteurs tant masculins que féminins qui avaient suivi leur maîtresse dans la mort, par strangulation ou par suicide collectif suite à un empoisonnement. Les corps de dix dames de la cour (des musiciennes ?), à la coiffure richement parée, gisaient en deux rangées de cinq sous des nattes de roseau dans le secteur méridional, à côté, entre autres, d'une harpe et d'une lyre. Le contenu verdâtre d'une petite coquille de Cardium provenant du golfe Persique, constitue l'ombre à paupières avec lequel sa propriétaire se maquillait les yeux. E.G.
